What is AAEE?

AAEE is the peak professional association for environmental educators in Australia. AAEE:

- represents the interests of EE on state and federal government advisory bodies, in planning and policy development, and by lobbying government and other agencies for the needs of EE and its educators
- keeps members updated with latest news, research, policy and resources thus providing a vital EE network across the country.

Who is AAEE for?

All those educating and encouraging people to understand their environment, appreciate environmental values and live sustainably.

You may be a student, an environmental manager or educator. You may be working in local/state government, business, industry, formal education, NGO or community group. Or you may be a guide, interpreter, exhibition designer or visitor researcher in a museum, zoo, botanic garden, national park or reserve.

Education may be your main role, or just a part, but AAEE provides YOU with important professional support.

What are its services?

- Professional development via conferences, workshops and seminars
- Access to the latest Australian research in Australian Journal of Environmental Education, sent free (full hard copy) to members
- Networking opportunities
- A voice to state and federal governments about your issues as educators
- Up-to-date news in EE from around the country via quarterly newsletter, ozEEnews, and AAEE e-monthly.
- Biennial conference - discounted registration
- Participation in Special Interest Groups
- Access to resources in members' section of our website

Together a stronger voice for EE - join us!

Are your specific interests catered for?

To link up with environmental educators across your own state or territory you can get involved with a local AAEE Chapter. See the website at www.aee.org.au for contact details for your State/Territory Chapter.

AAEE now has six nationally based Special Interest Groups (SIGs):

- Early Childhood Education
- Research Student and Early Career Researcher
- Teachers and Teacher Education
- Transformative Learning
- Decade of Education for Sustainable Development
- Young People and Environmental Citizenship

The Association is also keen to support the formation of other new SIGs where there is sufficient interest.

Can YOU afford not to keep in touch with the environmental education profession?
